

THE DEMOCRAT

THE PEOPLE'S PAPER

Official Organ of the Tax-Payers

CAPE GIRARDEAU, MO.

SATURDAY, JULY 4, 1891.

They had a destructive storm up in Iowa the other day that made many farmers poor men.

The United States is young yet, but it leads the world in its libraries. The public libraries of all Europe put together contain about 21,000,000 volumes; those of this country contain about 50,000,000.

The Democrats wanted an "educational campaign" in Ohio and Iowa last fall. They will be gratified this year, and the people will learn so much about Democratic tariff lies that Campbell and Boies will be retired from public life.

In a suit in which it was claimed that a lot of tobacco was damaged brought at Douglasville, Ga., the judge took some of the weed and chewed it. He decided that it was damaged to the amount of 15 cents per pound, and gave judgment accordingly.

The new constitution for Kentucky provides that the Governor shall be elected in the odd-numbered years, the Representatives in the even-numbered years, and that the Governor shall be elected at the same time and place as the Representatives. Since the constitution tinkers have become sorer they have been wondering whether they have any provision at all for the election of a Governor.

No college undertakes to furnish brains to its students. Its functions are to train such brains as young men bring with them. No college can make a man of ability of a youth who has no ability, and indeed no college can even educate a man without his own effort. Every man who is educated at all is self-educated. Schools and colleges are valuable aids to him in the work of self-education, but it is he and not they who must do that work.

It is stated that the Illinois Central Railway has determined to build a fleet of large ocean steamships for passenger and freight service to run between New Orleans and South American ports both on the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans. The plan is to make Chicago a distributing point both for South American products and as a shipping point for American products South. This, if carried out, will be one of the most important of any transportation schemes lately devised.

The Alliance sub-treasury scheme proposes that farm and plantation products shall be stored in government warehouses and treasury notes to 80 per cent. of the market price at that time be advanced to the owner. Here is an example of how it would work. Peanuts last year were worth 80 cents a bushel. If the plan had been in working order, tens of thousands of bushels would have been stored. The owners would have advanced 80 per cent. of 80 cents—64 cents per bushel. Peanuts now sell at 50 cents a bushel. Is that the sort of scheme that the sub-treasury enthusiasts expect sensible people to vote for?

Since Major McKinley's nomination was first made probable, months ago no one has had any serious doubt of the way Ohio would vote next fall. It has only been a question of how large the Republican majority will be, and no small figures have been used in the estimates, either. Nevertheless, Secretary Foster's enthusiastic survey of the situation, as reported from his home in Fostoria, will be read with deep interest by all interested in the fight in the Buckeye State, and the slight importance which he attaches to the Alliance movement there removes the only uncertain factor in the contest from serious consideration.

"The election of Mr. McKinley," says Harper's Weekly, "by a large vote would show clearly a reaction from the feeling of last autumn, and a reconsideration of the verdict against the tariff. Congress would meet with the Republicans inspired, and eager to offer a thoroughly organized opposition to a large but cumbersome majority apprehensive of itself, and it is by no means sure that the session would not end with Democratic prospects clouded by Democratic legislation. It must not be forgotten, on the other hand, that Ohio is generally a Republican State, and that unusual efforts will be made for Republican success for the reasons already mentioned."

Public feeling in regard to stringent regulation of the immigration and naturalization of foreigners in this country is more seriously aroused than for many years. The "Native American" excitement of forty years ago was due to a perception of tendencies which are now confirmed. But in form it was a combination of secrecy, sectarianism, and politics, which like a whirlwind blew violently, but soon spent its force. The results of illegitimate immigration and political enfranchisement were foreseen, but they were then theoretical. The time that has elapsed however has brought us face to face with actual perils. The volume of immigration has increased, while its quality rapidly decreases. The population of the country is largely heterogeneous, while homogeneity is the condition of great national power.

The one thing that Prohibition seems to prohibit more than any other thing is the election of any of its candidates. As a means of promoting temperance Prohibition is a hypocritical sham and a failure.

The greatest meat eaters in the world are the people of America, whose average consumption is 175 pounds per annum. The English come next, with an average of a little over 110 pounds. The French eat only half as much meat as the English.

Bollinger county is a strong Democratic county, but the Democrats out there are not for Cleveland. They are free coinage men and believe in coining their own money, even if they do have to coin it from pewter. All counterfeiterers are Democrats, especially Bollinger county Democrats.

Boston papers are disputing as to when the wheelbarrow was invented, some claiming that a Frenchman introduced it in 1669 and others that it was not known until 1730. Load up the discussion and wheel it off, gentlemen. If you never used the wheelbarrow on the "dump" of a railroad, you can't possibly appreciate the vehicle as it is.

It has for long years been supposed that black was the most becoming color a woman of certain age could wear, but old traditions have been knocked down under the new regime, and the present code proclaims that black should only be used by the very old and the very young.

There is strong talk in Great Britain that with the death of Queen Victoria the monarchy will end. Why not? The people of that great country, especially the middle class, are quite capable of taking care of legislation. Then why pay so large a price for a mere figure head?

More than 10,000 medical students have graduated during the last two years in the United States, and are now looking for business in that line. The number seems out of all proportion, but a medical journal declares that 7,000 graduates per year can be turned out to make a fair living, as the population advances in the same ratio.

Berlin now has a system of large postal wagons with sorting tables, stamping arrangements, and every thing else used in preparing mail for transportation—which operate on all the city mail routes. About two hours is thus saved in preparing the city mails for the trains, as the clerks do all the sorting, stamping and bundling while the wagons roll swiftly along. This would not be practicable in America until most of the cities are repaved.

In Switzerland a Sunday law has been enacted applying to all railroad, steamboat, and tramway companies, and post offices. Working time must not be more than 12 hours a day, even on occasions of increased traffic. Engine and train men must have at least 10 hours unbroken rest, and other employees 9 hours. They must also have 52 days off yearly, and 17 of these must be Sundays. No reduction in wages is to be made for such rest days. All freight traffic on Sunday is prohibited, except live stock.

The Pittsburg Times: The lazy little English sparrows, have discovered a new method of obtaining food without hustling for it, and every morning they noisily put the idea into execution, being observed by many persons. When the electric lights are turned off at day break the sparrows cluster around the globe until the globes are cooled. Then the bothersome scavengers slide down into the globes by way of the carbons and eat the unfortunate insects attracted by the glare during the night. Usually the sparrows get a good breakfast of fat flies and bugs, and often as many as half a dozen birds cluster into one globe.

In an article on the Ohio situation and Major McKinley Harper's Weekly remarks that "the hold of that gentleman upon his party is difficult to understand." On the contrary, it is not at all difficult to understand. Major McKinley is a man of brains, of courage, of high character and tireless energy. He is a devoted patriot and a sincere friend of American labor. He has the pluck, sagacity and personal magnetism of a born leader of men. Under these circumstances it is not at all "difficult to understand" why the great party that he has served with distinguished loyalty should trust and honor him. It would be strange if it did not. Republicans are not ungrateful. They know a statesman when they see him.

Little Dora, the Lynn-old daughter of Lincoln Hamline, Leharpe, Ill., is possessed of the faculty of mind reading. She can readily name the spots on any set of dominoes from looking at the backs of them, or she will select from the set any number asked for, all the dominoes being turned face downward, and thoroughly mixed up. If one be slipped out of the set without her knowledge, and it is called for, she will quickly reply that the number is missing. The child can not count from one to six, but will announce the spots, thus, "five and a six," "six and a four," or any other number, more readily from the backs of the dominoes than from their faces. The child has never failed to call the right number. White paper has been pasted over the backs of the dominoes to prevent any chance of the child having learned the backs, and in every instance she has successfully indicated the number on the opposite side.

The Gila monster's bite is not as poisonous as tradition declares, for a New York snake charmer bitten by one still lives.

It is announced that Mexico has stopped bull fights. But it isn't announced that the United States has stopped prize fights.

Major McKinley has no envious competitors to fight in his own party in Ohio. There's where he has a long start of Governor Campbell.

If Parnell married all the women whose pictures were printed in the newspapers recently, each as an accurate portrait of Mrs. Parnell, he is a regular Mormon.

Prince George of Greece is "doing" the United States as rapidly as if he were grieved and shot from a catapult. San Francisco and New York are his only stopping places.

The Yale graduate who had his sheepskin garished for a pool bill of $1.15 is a Pennsylvanian, but neither Bardley nor Marsh would have allowed themselves to be "called down" in that way.

General Neil Dow advocates punishment by the lash on the back for liquor dealers who violate the Maine prohibition laws. We presume he would have them kneed down to receive the strokes.

Roscoe Dean, a 13-year old boy living in Bloeker street, Newark, tried an experiment the other night. He fired a pistol into the lunghole of an empty whisky barrel which was standing on the sidewalk in front of Frank Duffy's grocery at 166 Plane street. Dean was thrown into a cellarway, where Mr. Duffy found him a moment later. His left arm was broken. It is said he stood on top of the barrel when he fired the pistol into the lunghole and that he was thrown six feet in the air.

When it was the fashion for women to be embonpoint, the tall and slender woman hid herself away from public gaze as much as possible. She shrank into her boots and walked stooped shouldered when she was to be seen in public places. Now that she has her lining she is making good use of it. She walks erect at noonday—also in the evening. When she has a beau she chooses one she can look down upon. It accentuates her girlish style. Her clinging, drooping, Bernhard draperies still further lead forward and upward. It is a comparatively easy thing for a woman 5 feet 6 to add 4 inches to her apparent height, if she be not fat. Fat that very word seems horrible to the sex just now.

This is the way Bob Ingersoll dishes up the "eternal conflict" between capital and labor, and there is more truth than poetry in it: "Here is a shoe shop. One man in the shop is always busy at work during the day—always industrious. In the evening he goes courting a good, nice girl. There are five other men at work in the shop who don't do any such thing. They spend half their working hours in loafing, and their evenings in dissipation. The first young man, by and by, cuts out from the others and gets a shoe store of his own. Then he is able to take his wife out to ride of an evening. The five laborers, his former companions, who see him indulging in this little luxury, retire to a neighboring saloon and pass a resolute that there is an eternal struggle between labor and capital."

The Prince of Wales has brought ruin to two domestic hearts that any man in Europe. By giving countenance to a fast life he has ruined more youths than any man of the century. These things have been known for a long time. People hinted at "young blood" and remained silent. One eventful night the Prince engaged in a gambling game during the progress of which a distinguished army officer cheated. All gamblers cheat. The Prince's set gambled. These things were known long ago. But a tale bearing woman started the talk, and the world was set a flame. The Prince is condemned everywhere. What for? For debauching those dear to his chums? No. For ruining the hopes of ancient families? No. For owing a lay-out, playing with a gambler, and afterward telling the truth about it? Yes, Bal!

ATTENTION BACK DOOR. Attention is again called to the fact, which has been published more than once, that in some of the cities of England, it is the custom to ship to Canada the inmates of workhouses and poorhouses, in order to get rid of them. It is intended, of course, that they shall reach the United States; and they are sent to Canada simply to avoid any international complication that might arise from violation of our immigration laws. Once in Canada, they manage to find their way across the border at various points into this country.

We are glad to see that the administration is beginning to pay particular attention to that class of individual emigrants. It is preparing to shut the back door. We have no use in the United States for the population of English workhouses and poorhouses, and it is high time that some decisive steps are being taken to stop these thousands who annually drift over the border from Canada. They are especially numerous in New England, where crossing the border is an extremely easy thing. This rift in the legitimate product of free trade, which grinds down the workman until he can merely keep body and soul together on the starvation wages he gets.

EDUCATION AND BUSINESS. Pittsburg Dispatch: Now that the colleges are turning graduates loose, there is a lively discussion as to what is to become of young men who have nothing but such education to recommend them to the business world. A New York paper has interviewed a score or more of well-known business men on the prospects of the college-bred as compared with men who had not college advantages, but were compelled to work early in life. As usual, the majority preferred the latter. This is an annual "news special" in the East; but, while the novelty was worn off several seasons ago, it shows one good thing: the business men have gotten over the idea that college education is always a handicap.

A couple of years ago dozens of good business men who made their own fortunes were wont to declare that a college education spoiled young men for business pursuits, and the claim was set up that the man who never went to college had the advantage and was more liable to become a success. That argument comes somewhat from the glory of a "self-made" man, who believes because he succeeded without the opportunities of college education he had an advantage over the college fellow. The colleges, however, need not fear that those who disparage their advantages are going to bankrupt them by withdrawing their sons from school. Say what they will to the contrary, they send their children to school—and hardly to be handicapped.

NOTHING FOR NOTHING. New York Press: It is not to be wondered at that a meeting of New York working people did not receive with enthusiasm the talk of Senator Peffer of Kansas, in favor of making money plentiful with a printing press. No one knows better than the intelligent New York mechanic that, be money ever so abundant, nothing can be got for nothing. The government issue would go to the owner of land and of houses, and, if the Peffer idea be carried out, also the owner of wheat and rye. None of it would be banked the security of muscle and skill. Wages would go up, of course, but not as rapidly or as high in proportion as prices. In other words, the people who have property now, land, stocks and bonds, houses and horses, would perhaps temporarily benefit by an unlimited issue of paper money, whereas the workman, with only his strength and his skill, would be absolutely injured by the diminished value of his daily or weekly wage. No man is more interested than the worker for wages in keeping up the value of the money in which his wages are paid.

As for Senator Peffer's idea about Wall street being left out in the cold from the benefits resulting from a vast expansion of the currency, that is too silly to tell to New Yorkers. Everybody here of the middle age, with a memory, knows that the Wall street brokers never had a busier or more profitable time than when greenbacks were lying about at $2.70 for a dollar in coin, and everybody knows, too, that when the currency was brought to par, and the bubble of inflation pricked, Wall street suffered most severely, while the workman, on the other hand, began to get real value for his money. The great fortune of Wall street was made in a period of comparative inflation.

Senator Peffer is out of his field here. The workmen of New York read and think. They also have memories, and they know that they have not been benefited in the past by unhealthy inflation of the currency, and could not expect to be in the future.

ITALIAN EMIGRATION CHECKED. Premier Rudini, after having done his best, through disruption of diplomatic relations with the United States, to scare Italians and keep them from coming here, on the theory that this is a lawless country, with a weak government, where Italians would be butchered by mobs, has been trying his hand by home legislation still further to secure his patriotic object of keeping Italians within Italy.

The Italian Parliament has passed a law which substantially forbids minors emigrating to this or any other country, and which must be long at least to restrict the immigration of adults and families. The plans of the steamship companies for bringing emigrants here have been so well laid and so long in operation that even still stronger measures than Premier Rudini has yet proposed could not immediately and completely stop the exportation of his countrymen. Every immigrant in this country is a lodestone to magnetize here some relative of his own, or his sweetheart, and we have so large an Italian-born population in the United States now that this magnetism cannot be immediately interrupted nor permanently destroyed by any laws, for the laws of human nature are stronger than the laws of any particular government.

Here, as long as our protective tariff is maintained, Italians are sure of higher wages than at home, and they know it, and will come, therefore, in spite of all the laws that Premier Rudini can pass. Here the opportunity for acquiring fertile land at reasonable rates, and selling the product at profitable prices, and of establishing homes, educating children and engaging in commerce, manufactures and finance, is so great and so well known to the great masses of the Italian peasantry that they will continue to come here. And if Premier Rudini wishes to make his laws effective, he must encounter the opposition of all the steamship men by making their methods of solicitation of passengers illegal, and punishable with fine and imprisonment and confiscation of their vessels. And yet Premier Rudini's object is patriotic, and in his plans he undoubtedly represents the sentiment of his loving, enlightened King, Umberto, who wishes to see his own country increase in population, riches, intelligence and general welfare.

New York's tiger is an awful animal, but the Quaker City's defalcation elephant beats it out of sight as a political monstrosity.
